Benefits of investing in CPD for teachers

Improve student outcomes

High-quality CPD for teachers has a significant effect on pupils' learning outcomes.

"There is good evidence that high-quality professional development (CPD) for teachers can significantly improve pupils' attainment."

Education Policy Institute, 2020

Inspire effective teachers

Not only does CPD impact teacher effectiveness, it can also improve teacher retention and wellbeing.

"Not only is more CPD likely to improve their teaching, but it may also improve the wellbeing and retention of teachers."

Education Policy Institute, 2021

Enhance subject knowledge

Now entering their 13th year, New Teacher Subject Days have consistently achieved fantastic feedback from participants and their schools.

"Our ECT has been able to reflect on different approaches to teaching and learning, which has fed into her practice. She shares ideas and resources from the course, and has had an injection of enthusiasm that is felt by the whole team."

Head of Department

Resource sharing

The Learning Resource Assignment

As well as gaining resources from each day, participants will devise, produce and implement an imaginative resource of their own which is linked to a topic they have explored on the New Teacher Subject Days course. On the final day of the course, participants share their unique resources and their experiences of using them in the classroom.

These resources are made available to participants electronically, and are also intended to be useful within participants' departments. The Learning Resource Assignment (LRA) can contribute to ECT formal assessments in school.

Participants are also given access to the thousands of resources in the PTI's online Staffroom, normally only available to affiliated PTI members.

"The PTI course has not only boosted my confidence in my subject knowledge but it has also reignited my passion for teaching, as well as inspiring me to think outside the box."

NTSD attendee, 2024

"The PTI have provided me with the confidence in trialling new concepts and ideas. The topics have been really useful as well as the teachers, making me more comfortable within the classroom."

NTSD attendee, 2024

"The speakers were really inspirational and created good engagement for the topic. The workshops were useful in teaching new pedagogy that can be used in the classroom with any topic."

NTSD attendee, 2022

For teachers by teachers

The course is designed and led by practising teachers, ensuring that the academic material is grounded in successful classroom practice.

Rhea Green – History

"PTI History New Teacher Subject Days combine lectures from the best academics in popular areas of KS3-KS5 study with exciting and innovative methods of teaching. New teachers are supported to deliver relevant and engaging lessons that will challenge students of all ages and abilities, helping them to better understand the world around them."

Holyhead School

Paul Haywood – French

"The French New Teacher Subject Days are designed to inspire and give you a wealth of varied and authentic cultural resources to take back to your departments to use immediately. The lectures are designed to reinvigorate and inspire you, reminding us all what we loved about studying French in the first place!"

The Henrietta Barnett School

Danny Clift – Chemistry

"These days are designed to take you through the building blocks of the subject in order that your understanding of the underlying principles of chemistry is firmly in place. Our explorations will ensure you can see how chemistry, rather than being a series of disconnected areas of study, becomes a holistic subject tied together by a set of core principles."
